

Message from the VP

Dear Student Affairs Colleagues,

What fun we had on Friday at the annual Louie Awards and the ball games after! It was wonderful to see everyone who was able to make it and served as an outstanding reminder of the high-quality talent we have within our division and beyond supporting students and playing key roles in advancing our university community. I deeply valued this opportunity to celebrate and be in community together. Congratulations again to the winners listed below and a special thanks to everyone who submitted nominations and helped make the event a success.

Next week, candidates will be on campus for the Executive Director for Student Resources position. I hope that you will help us get the word out about the student forums and consider attending the open forums yourself. This critical position, along with others currently out for recruitment, represent a significant investment in the capacity for Student Affairs to engage in strategic, innovative, and intentional work to improve the overall student support infrastructure. As we consider the advancement of our own work, I want to offer an additional reminder about the NASPA New Mexico Conference coming to UNM next month. Registration and program proposals are still open.

Finally, I want to thank the Women's Resource Center and LoboRespect for their collaborative educational events surrounding Sexual Assault Awareness Month. This critical slate of programming is commendable both for raising important awareness and engaging in thoughtful preventative educational efforts, but also serves as a bright example of campus departments collaborating and synergistically combining resources to pursue shared goals and causes. Thank you to both departments for this important work.

With appreciation,
Eric
