Professional Bio

Beverly Bracker has over 20 years of higher education experience dedicated to supporting the career and professional development of diverse student and alumni populations. She believes in the transformative power of education and the critical importance of curiosity and ongoing learning.

Her first role in career services was at a nonprofit law school in San Diego where she started as Assistant Director and worked her way up to Assistant Dean of Career Services. Beverly then joined San Diego State University's Fowler College of Business as Director of the Career Management Center, where she started and built a new career center to provide services and resources for over 6,000 undergraduate and graduate business students. After moving to New Mexico in 2021, Beverly joined the University of New Mexico's Anderson School of Management, where she currently teaches a career and professional development course for MBA students and serves as the Program Manager for the Executive MBA degree program.

As a first-generation college student, Beverly earned her Bachelor of Arts with a double major in English and Psychology from the University of Iowa and went on to earn her Juris Doctor degree from the University of Iowa College of Law. After passing the California Bar Exam, and working in several different firms and practice areas, it became very clear that law was not the right career path for her. Beverly soon discovered that career services is where she belongs and ever since then has been motivated by a strong drive to help others find and pursue the right path for them.
